Discuss IT Topic: If you had the ability to download memories throughout your life to then one-day review them like a photo album, would you do it? These memories have to be kept on the cloud. This means you are connected and your eyesight would be no different than looking through a camera.

Response:

This is a topic like any other topics that's has its ups and downs. On the right side you could relieve your childhood life or any period of your life, but on the other hand you run the risk of people having the possibility to look at them since they are on a cloud, many hackers can do that. So running the risk of others looking at what you saw couldn't be very good for you, it could be edited or changed and you won't look good. Watching any period of your life again does not compensate the fact that your reputation/integrity is at risk. Therefore, I would not want to have that possibility of recording my life and storing it in a cloud. A simple memory is enough.
