DiscussIT Topic 6: Where is our country headed?

Discuss IT Topic: Over the last week, our country has had growing concerns on immigration bans, border safety, and executive orders that remind us of issues that have been plaguing our country for years. Now that Trump has been elected President, there has been people threatening to blow up the White House, human right protests, and a plethora of other sensitive subject matters that are very compelling to individual groups of people. Why have these issues come up now as we head into a time in which it seems no one is going to be happy with the outcomes? Will this create a split in this country and place citizens against one another when it comes to their views? In your opinion, what other topics are at the forefront of concern? Explain.

Response: Please make sure all grammar, spelling, indentation, and punctuation is correct.

Currently it looks like half of the country is against Trump and the other half is with trump. Whenever he signs a document or speaks about a certain thing that half of the population that is against him will most of the time be against everything that he said. This will happen because people don't want to listen to someone they don't like and many agree that it's not fair what he does. This really looks like if the country has split into two sectors. Sector Pro Trump and sector No Trump. Many fights and protest have happened against the opposing "Sector". The biggest current battle between the two is about how he temporarily cancelled all migrators to come in. Protest have happened in airports and still happen. Many verbal fights have occurred and it seems it will never diminish. The future is uncertain but it doesn't look so bright.
