DiscussIT Topic 5: Battle of the Animation Studios

Discuss IT Topic: Over the next couple of years, many design studios will be releasing and rereleasing new films based on previously scene characters and storylines. Star Wars, although it dates back to the 1970's is going back in time in the story, but they are more popular today than ever, even though the story has been gone back and forth numerous times. From Wonder Women, to three different versions of the Hulk, Spider-Man, and Bat-Man, these films keep coming out every year. Why are these films so popular? Are the movie goers not worried about reboots? Could it be the effects and realism of the characters? Explain...

Response: Please make sure all grammar, spelling, indentation, and punctuation is correct.

The reality of everything is that people don't search for something new, they search for something different. You can show anyone the same storyline but different visual effects and characters and they would still love it. Especially today with animations making it look so real as if it actually happened making it intriguing to the eye. I don't know about you but I would be the type of person waiting for star wars 50. If a person enjoys a storyline in specific, mentally they will enjoy any version of it unless the story line changes too much. Looking at statistics people are more exited for a remake or continuation of a movie rather than a new storyline. Humans in general like to stay with the same things. Mentally a human would rather stay in his/her box rather than exit it and find a new one. I'm one of those people that is currently counting down the hours for the new star wars movie. Movies just get better and better who knows what's to come in the future.
